A blog post about how to get an HP Printer back up and running at its best! Hp Printer Drivers Boisb-0207-00 is a blog post that discusses the troubleshooting of an HP Printer. When running any printer, it is always good to clean the print heads. To do this, turn on your printer and wait until the carriage is idle. Then, use a damp cloth to wipe down the roller of the print head. Also, if there are glass lenses in front of the print heads, use moistened lens paper to wipe them down. Next, open the door to let your printer sit for at least 20 minutes. After that period of time is up, turn off your printer then wait at least two minutes before turning it back on again. This helps to reset the print heads. This is where your printer can have a problem that cannot be fixed without a step-by-step solution. The first step that you need to take is to take a look at the rollers which are located under the carriage. Make sure that they are not dirty and if there is any dirt, you need to remove it with a soft cloth or cotton swab. There may also be dust stuck on the rollers so use this as an ointment for the problem. In case you don't have any dry/non-dried cloths around, wet a paper towel and wipe them down gently with water from your faucet. Once they are clean, dry them off immediately with a soft cloth. Next, make sure to check the white rollers which are located under the carriage. Using a soft cloth, wipe them down gently with a little bit of water from your faucet. You may also want to use a cotton swab to remove any debris that might be stuck on them as well as some dry items such as paper towels or some dry cloths. Dry them off quickly and then open the carriage door once more and let it sit for at least 20 minutes before turning it on again. Underneath your computer(s) is where you will find all of your printer cables. If they are not connected properly, it can cause a problem when you try to print. Make sure that all of the cables are connected in the right way and that they are straight. Also, check your connection to make sure that it is not loose. There could be dirt in this connection so lightly rub the connector with a wine-towel. This will dislodge any debris in there and also clean it. Make sure to clean all of your paper in and around the printer itself. Take off the side panels and remove any paper inside of them.
